

Chess.com

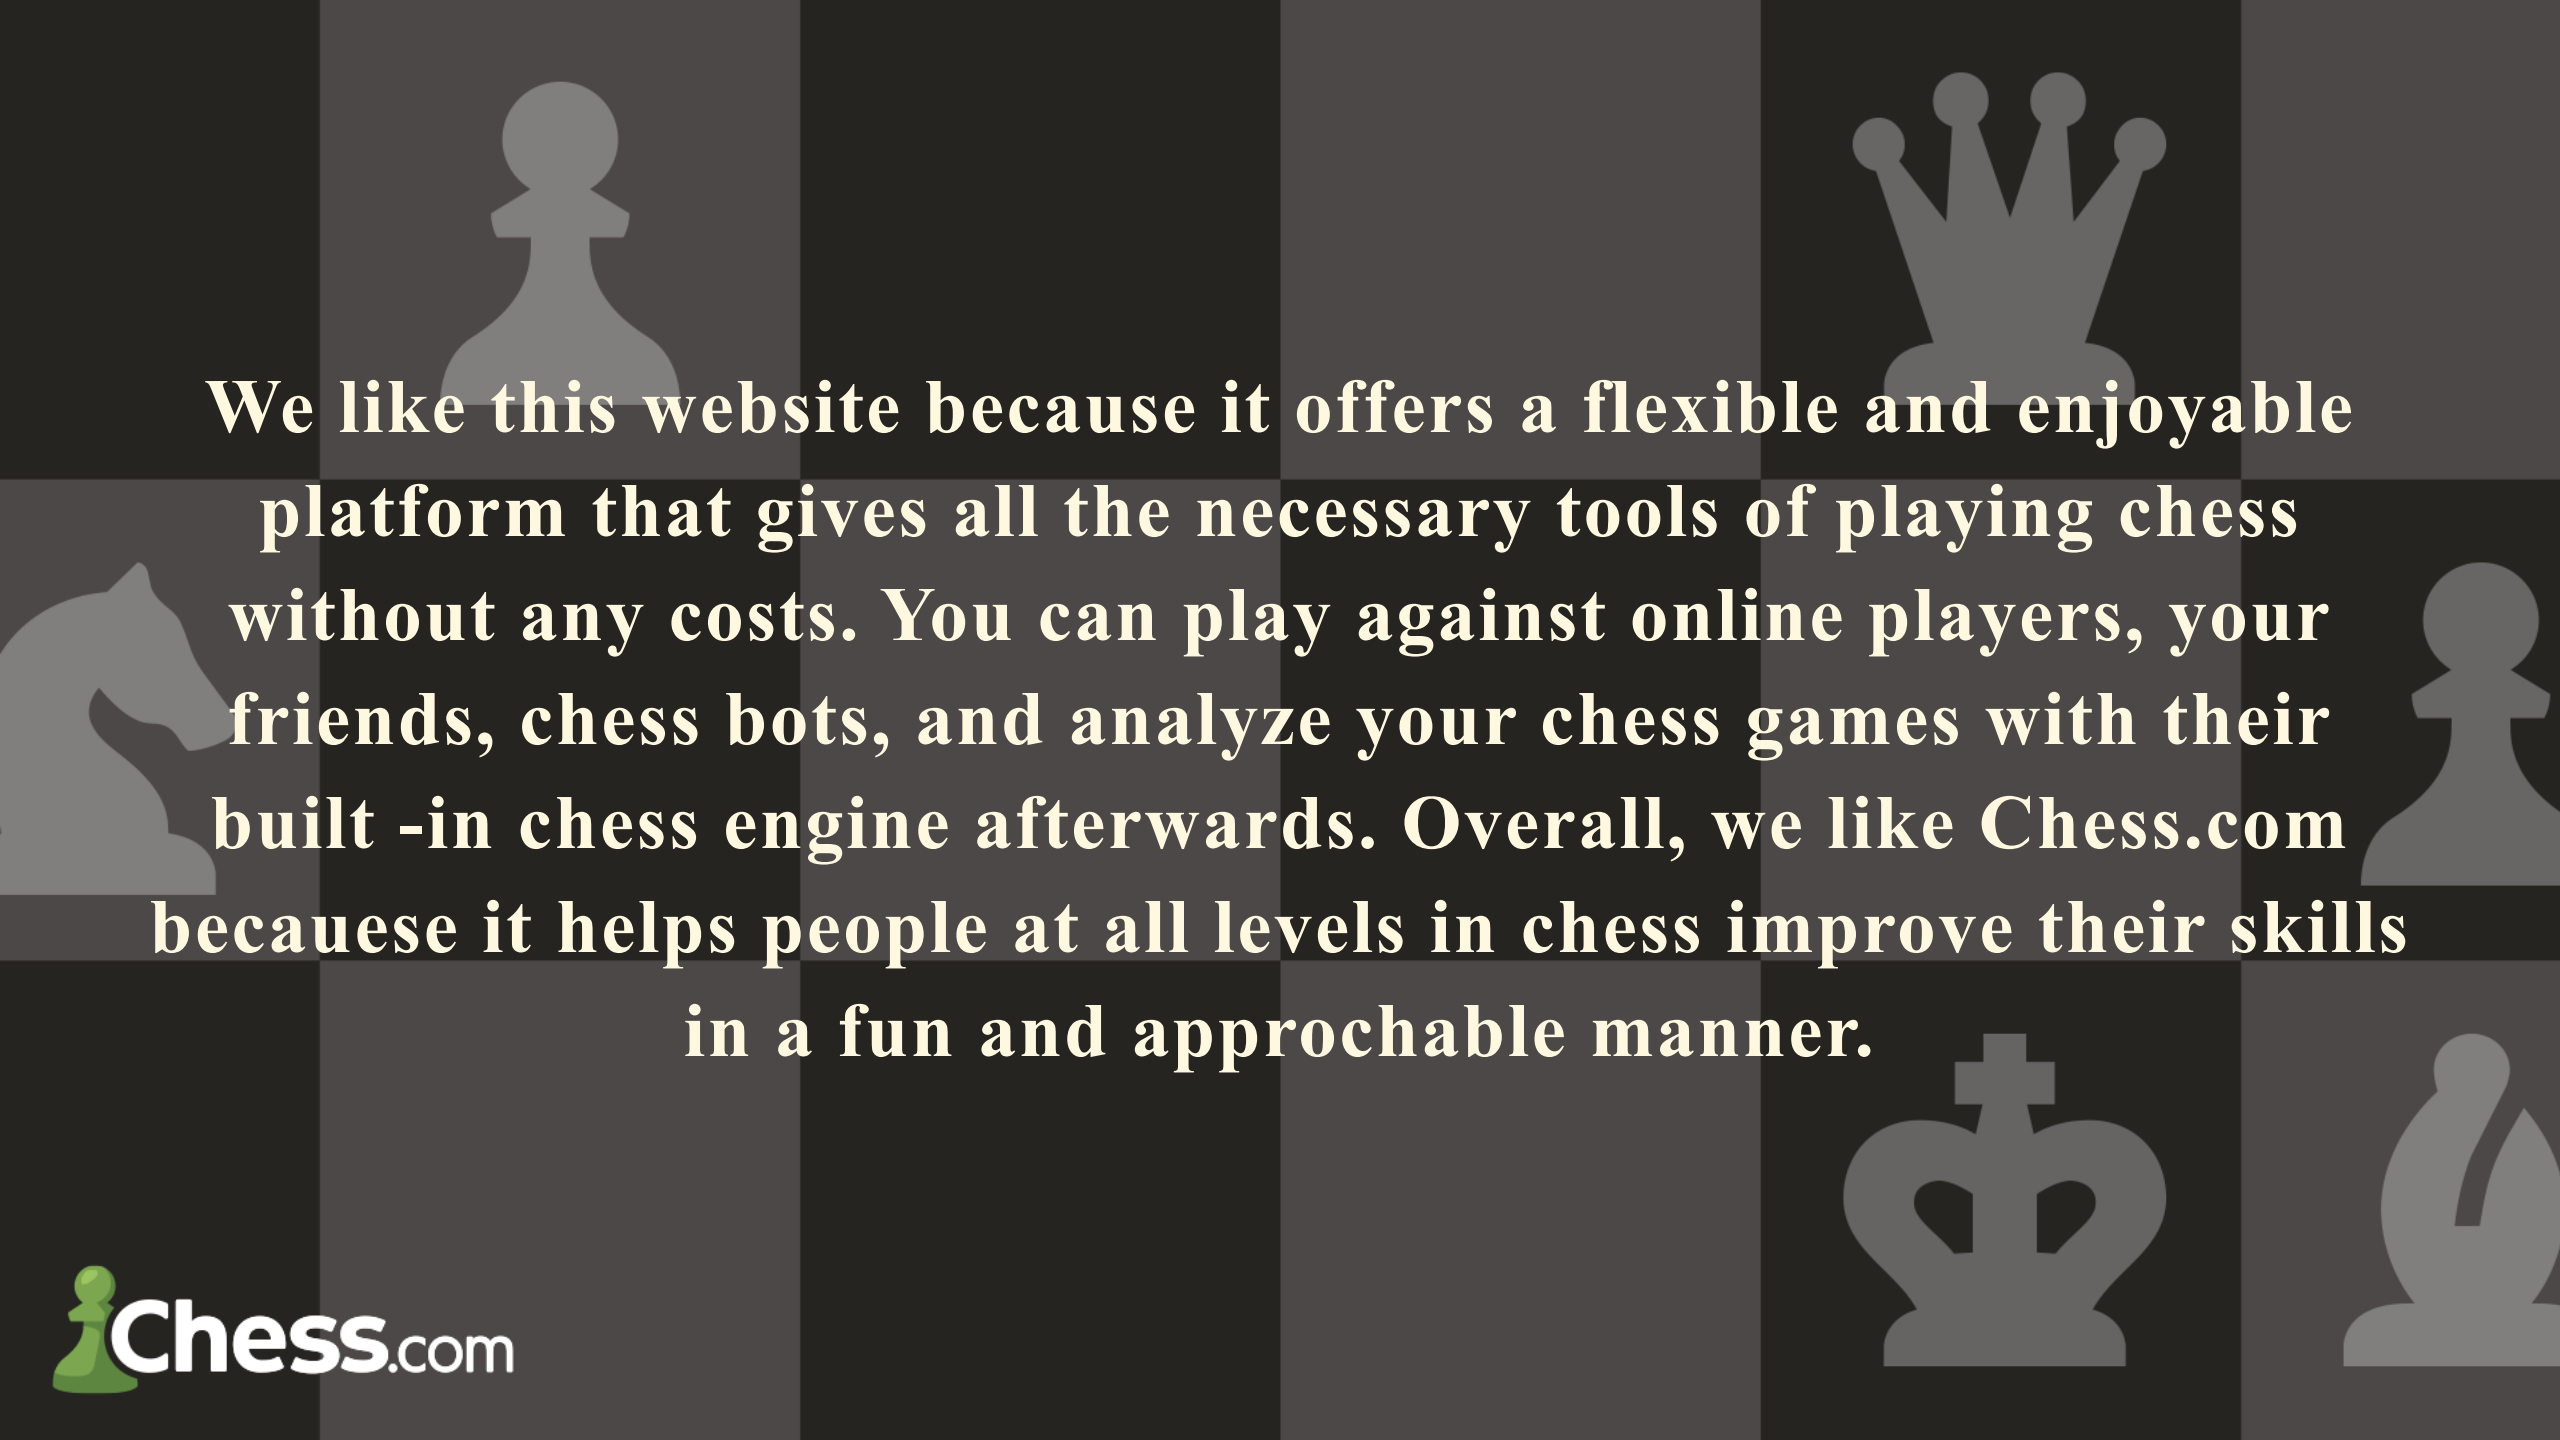

Presented by Anthony Zhang
and Jimmy Cao

Who created it?

The founders of Chess.com were
Erik Allebest and Jay Severson

Why do we like this website?

The background is a dark gray and black checkerboard pattern. Several chess pieces are visible as light gray silhouettes: a pawn at the top left, a crown at the top right, a knight on the middle left, a pawn on the middle right, a king at the bottom right, and a bishop at the bottom right.

We like this website because it offers a flexible and enjoyable platform that gives all the necessary tools of playing chess without any costs. You can play against online players, your friends, chess bots, and analyze your chess games with their built -in chess engine afterwards. Overall, we like Chess.com because it helps people at all levels in chess improve their skills in a fun and approachable manner.

Where can you get it?

- Not only can you access chess.com from a website, but you can also download the app from your mobile phone.

A person wearing a dark suit, white shirt, and blue patterned tie is seated at a table, playing a game of chess. Their right hand is raised, hovering over a light-colored chess piece on the board. The chessboard is a standard 8x8 checkered board with alternating light and dark squares. The pieces are made of wood or plastic, with dark pieces in the foreground and light pieces further back. The background is a plain, light-colored wall.

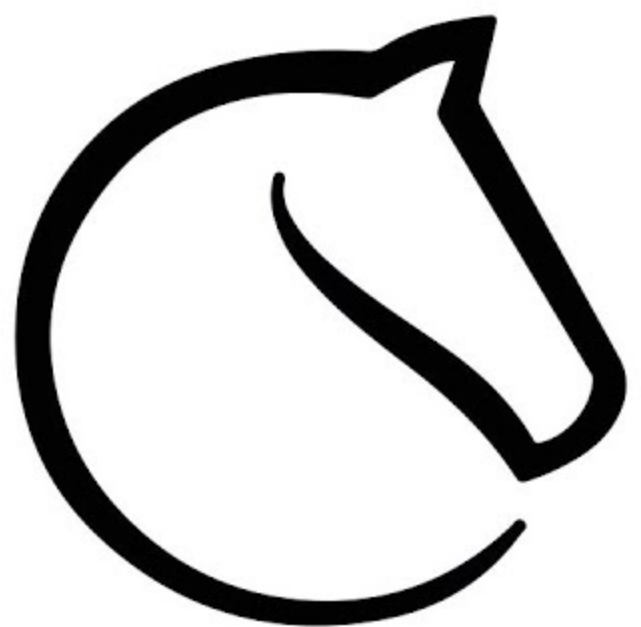

Where is their main office located?

Chess.com was created in 2006 and their headquarters are located in Palo Alto California

Who are their competitors?

ChessBase

LICHESS

The closest competitors to chess.com are lichess.org and chessbase.com.

These online platforms also offer online chess playing capabilities.

However, they are not as well known as chess.com. This is because the Chess.com's website is extremely beginner friendly and allows new players to immediately experience the game of chess.

The background of the image features several chess pieces rendered in a stylized, low-poly 3D aesthetic. The pieces are colored in various shades of blue and purple, with some having a gradient effect. They are scattered across the frame, including a knight in the bottom left, a king in the top right, a queen in the center, and a rook in the bottom right. The text "3 fun facts about chess.com" is centered over the image in a white, serif font.

3 fun facts about chess.com

- Chess.com is partners with some of the most wellknown chess masters. Such as GM (Grand master) Hikaru Nakamura, GM Robert Hess, and IM (International master) Anna Rudolf
- There is both a paid and free version of chess.com. The paid version includes a vast amount of lessons, daily puzzles and chess bots that you can play against. However, the free version already gives you the access to match up against strangers or your friends in chess.
- In addition to traditional chess, Chess.com offers various chess variants such as Chess960 (Fischer Random Chess), Three-Check, Crazyhouse, and Bughouse. These variants add excitement and variety to the chess-playing experience.

The background of the slide features several large, stylized chess pieces in shades of teal and green. These pieces, including a king, queen, rook, knight, and pawns, are arranged in a scattered pattern against a dark, textured background. The lighting creates soft shadows, giving the pieces a three-dimensional appearance.

Thank you for listening!